

TEMPORARY Medical Exemptions for CMS Mandate

Per Chris Bonn and Dr Al – (1/26/22)

CDC and MDH say once someone recovers from covid, they can receive your vaccine, however Dr. Al tells his patients that they can delay vaccine and receive it closer to the end of their 90 days. I did confirm this with him a few minutes ago.

Q. What are the criteria for being granted a temporary medical exemption from the COVID-19 vaccine mandate?

People who have been treated for COVID-19 disease with monoclonal antibodies or convalescent plasma should receive a temporary exemption until 90 days have passed since their treatment. This is to ensure the body can respond to the vaccine, without interference by antibodies included in the monoclonal and plasma treatments. People who are not sure if they received these treatments should consult with their healthcare provider. As stated previously, having had COVID-19 previously is not a criteria for a permanent medical exemption.
